

Joachim Schoss

Board Member and Serial Entrepreneur

University of St.Gallen

Executive School of Management,
Technology and Law

Joachim Schoss is a retired serial entrepreneur and was the founder and first CEO of Scout24. After a serious, almost fatal traffic accident he had to ask himself: What's next?

After the accident and the subsequent sale of Scout24 to Deutsche Telekom, he became a happy and relaxed person by pursuing a variety of activities for which he found time after no longer being CEO: Helping young entrepreneurs as a business angel, passing on his knowledge and learnings – especially to students in the field of entrepreneurship, setting up several foundations, becoming an impact investor, regularly using spiritual practices and this year becoming a father for the eighth time. He has designed and built a car, has traveled around the world seven times, has been appointed to various supervisory bodies of listed and unlisted companies and academic institutions, and lives in Switzerland, Spain and New Zealand.
