

Breeja Larson

American Former Competition Swimmer and Olympic Gold Medalist

Breeja Larson is an American former competition swimmer and Olympic gold medalist. She grew up with six siblings in a poor neighborhood in the United States. She started swimming professionally at 17 and became an Olympic champion just three years later. In 2021, she retired from professional swimming and is currently preparing for her non-competitive future.

University of St.Gallen

Executive School of Management,
Technology and Law